

Field Report: Brazil and Argentina — Cosmic History Activation

Even within the veils of darkest ignorance which now prevail we may see that there is still a movement of consciousness ever striving upward by degrees to that place where there is a “new heaven and a new Earth.” –Valum Votan

The recent journey to Brazil and Argentina carried a depth of presence that is difficult to describe. A deep sense of magic and remembrance was felt by everyone present, as if the atmosphere itself had been lifted into a rarified state.

At moments it felt reminiscent of the initial Cosmic History transmissions—when the familiar world would seem to dissolve and a higher frequency of awareness would enter.

Experiences like this reveal something that is difficult to convey through writing alone. In shared presence, knowledge becomes participatory rather than theoretical. Memory awakens through connection, and the invisible patterns that organize life become easier to perceive.

It was a reminder that beneath the turbulence of world events, another process is quietly unfolding.

The larger context for these events is that we are currently moving through the New Sirius Cycle (1987–2039), a 52-year period dedicated to establishing a new knowledge base within the planetary field. Initiated during the Harmonic Convergence of 1987, this cycle represents a long arc of time-released knowledge intended to help humanity navigate a profound civilizational transition—the shift from the biosphere to the noosphere.

It was within this larger context that I traveled south.

When I arrived in Porto Alegre, Brazil, it was the Resonant Moon (January) summertime in the Southern Hemisphere. The air was warm and heavy with the energy of the season, and the slower rhythm of life was immediately noticeable.

I had come for two five-day Cosmic History events at Nova Terra, where our group would meet with the land and reactivate the 13:20 frequency into its next octave. After the events, I would travel to Buenos Aires for an evening event, followed the next day by a meeting with key kin and practitioners from Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, and Brazil.

In preparation for these meetings, the recent FLT Report framed the deeper context of our work, in the following way ...

*...The Thirteen Moon Calendar Change Peace Movement—as it existed in the late 1990s, early 2000s, and even leading up to 2012—has shifted form. The world it was speaking to no longer exists.

One might ask: If everything depends on the calendar, why are we no longer campaigning for a calendar change?

The answer lies in an important distinction: the 13 Moon calendar is the foundation, but the mission itself is vastly larger.

We are now operating under new conditions, within a different psychic atmosphere, and facing an entirely new evolutionary mandate. The teachings themselves must evolve into new applications capable of meeting the demands of this moment.

The 13 Moon calendar provides the timing matrix—the harmonic structure. The deeper work, however, is the transformation of consciousness: restructuring perception, cultivating new planetary values, and activating the evolutionary potential encoded within the human being.

The calendar is the doorway, not the destination.

The journey itself had not been simple. Traveling from Oregon to Florida and then onward to Brazil, I arrived in Miami for the international connection only to find the airport in complete chaos.

At the American Airlines terminal, long lines wound through the concourse, departure boards filled with delays, and the atmosphere was tense with travelers trying to reach their destinations. For several hours it remained unclear whether the flight would depart at all.

In moments like this, one feels the full force of mechanical time—the schedules, the pressure, the constant attempt to keep vast systems moving according to rigid timetables.

Eventually, after a long wait and considerable uncertainty, the flight finally took off.

Stepping off the plane in Brazil near sunset, the warm summer air wrapped around me immediately. There was a sense of relief simply to be outside the current climate of the United States.

After spending the night at an airport hotel, Ishram (Kin 187) came to pick me up the following morning. It had been eight years since we had last seen one another, and eight years since my previous visit to Brazil in 2018. That earlier journey had been followed by our large gathering in Mexico in 2019, shortly before the global shutdown that halted public events around the world.

Those familiar with the biographies may remember that Ishram assisted Votan and me during our years in Australia. Later, together with Andre (Kin 93), he played a key role in helping locate and secure the land that would eventually become Nova Terra, the first Galactic Education Center established in the Spectral Storm Ring (2016) in Brazil.

Returning after so many years, I felt both the inertia of the past and the openness of the future. In the weeks leading up to my departure, several unexpected obstacles arose, with some even suggesting that the trip should not take place. Yet despite these challenges, the timing ultimately felt precise.

In many ways it was a small reflection of the fragmentation of our present world—a fragmentation that touches nearly every system, even movements dedicated to peace. Part of the reason for writing the recent FLT Report was to bring clarity to the direction of this work, which is often interpreted in many different ways depending on the perspective of the observer.

Event Overview

The first Cosmic History workshop coincided with Resonant 15 (January 24), the midpoint of the 13 Moon Resonant Seed year. It also marked what would have been the eighty-seventh solar return of José Argüelles, Valum Votan. During our discussions we frequently returned to the significance of 1987—the year of the Harmonic Convergence and the beginning of the New Sirius Cycle.

This 52-year cycle was conceived as a period dedicated to establishing a new knowledge base on Earth, to assist humanity through a profound civilizational transition (biosphere-noosphere transition). It is referred to as the first New Sirius Cycle. For those unfamiliar with the system, the July 26 start date of the 13 Moon year coincides with the heliacal rising of Sirius.

Earlier in the year, the current Resonant Seed cycle had already begun in England at Dev Aura with the opening of the Invisible Libraries and the activation of the Year of the Divine Feminine, corresponding to the sixth time dimension within the Nine-Year Vision Map.

These events marked the beginning of what we have called a triple activation. The process will culminate in Taiwan during the Day Out of Time and the Galactic New Year, carrying us into the seventh year of the Nine-Year Vision Map (2020 - 2029) and the activation of the GM108X force field initiating the Solar Ring of the Red Galactic Moon.

For those familiar with this work, you will note that on the Planet Holon these locations correspond to specific zones: England (Sun Zone), Brazil (Skywalker Zone), and Taiwan (Wind Zone).

As of July 26, 2026, 13 years will remain in the first New Sirius Cycle to lay the foundation of this Galactic Mayan knowledge base. For a full report, see the recent FLT Report.

Our purpose in Brazil was to reactivate the living current of this knowledge base. It was both a Cosmic History activation and an integration of the living field of the synchronic order.

Don't forget the origin, nor forget the completion.

In a preface to a later Spanish edition of The Mayan Factor, José Argüelles wrote:

In general, the peoples south of the equator have less to lose from the transformation of present-day values and therefore stand a better chance of taking a leading role in this process. The forces of cosmic transformation are now being unleashed.

During the gatherings we revisited the foundational context of the work, beginning with the World Thirteen Moon Calendar Change Peace Movement initiated by José and Lloydine Argüelles. That Movement laid the groundwork for much of what would later unfold. Over the 20-year period from 1991 to 2011, Valum Votan developed the broader framework of the synchronic codes and began transmitting the system of Cosmic History to me—a body of knowledge that continues to evolve today.

Four Levels of Understanding (Content of the Workshops)

The two events at Nova Terra were organized around four nested levels of understanding through the lens of Cosmic History: the human, the planetary, the galactic, and the cosmic. Each level built upon the previous one, though within the time available we could only offer a fractal snapshot.

Participants also worked within their Earth Families, where the material could be discussed, reflected upon, and shared back with the group. These interactions are an essential part of the process. When people come together in this way, they activate one another's memory circuits. The knowledge becomes participatory rather than purely theoretical.

Even as I write this, I am aware that the written word can only approximate what occurs within a living field. Much of what unfolds arises through presence, resonance, and shared attention—qualities felt within the body that cannot be fully captured on a page. Still, I hope that something of the atmosphere and spirit can be transmitted through these reflections.

The structure of the workshops reflects the fractal nature of reality itself. Each level mirrors the others, communicating through pattern and frequency. From this perspective, the human being is not separate from the larger cosmos. Rather, the cosmos is already encoded within the human body, waiting to be remembered and consciously activated.

Human and Planetary Levels

To embody the cosmic human, however, we must first understand what it means to be human. This was the theme of our first day.

We are born into a pre-scripted narrative. Unless we consciously question it, we tend to live our lives within stories and assumptions that were created long before we arrived. In an era when the technosphere is expanding at an exponential scale, the cultivation of inner technology becomes an essential balancing principle. In fact, the cultivation of the inner realm must be prioritized, or else we risk being swept away by external algorithms.

Our essence, or Primordial Self, can be understood as the ground of awareness prior to narrative. It is the still point from which thoughts, emotions, and perceptions arise and dissolve. When we learn to rest in this ground of awareness, the mind gradually loosens its attachment to the identities and assumptions that normally define our experience. This understanding is the fundamental essence of this work.

Yet today human biology is increasingly pushed to synchronize with machine rhythms—the 12:60 timing frequency. This acceleration can disrupt the nervous system and gradually distance us from our innate connection to the Earth and to our own intuitive guidance.

Within that dissonance we often forget our place within the web of life.

From the human perspective the workshops then expanded outward to the planetary level. The roots of this work extend back decades through the study of planetary geomancy—the art of reading and interacting with the Earth as a living intelligence. Geomancy can be understood as a form of Earth divination, a way of recognizing energetic patterns and sacred points across the planetary body.

As Valum Votan often explained, one of the early public expressions of this vision emerged in 1970 with the creation of the Whole Earth Festival in California. Coinciding with the first Earth Day, it became one of the earliest zero-waste gatherings in the United States and an early example of a culture seeking to live in greater harmony with the Earth.

From these beginnings emerged the vision of establishing a planetary frequency grid based on the 13:20 timing frequency—a telepathic network of human beings living in resonance with the Earth and with one another.

These ideas later expanded into the cosmology presented in Earth Ascending and eventually into the much larger framework of Cosmic History.

Galactic and Cosmic Levels

From the planetary level we moved into the galactic perspective.

We discussed the nature of galactic culture, the GM108X transmission, and the idea that stars are frequencies. If we are able to perceive them, it is because their codes are already contained within us. The human brain functions as an antenna, sensing the greater field of the noosphere.

We also explored how the Telektonon prophecy of Pacal Votan identifies four key factors playing out in the world today. The daily headlines often reflect these deeper patterns: archetypal distortions of planetary principles—Maldek (sexual abuse and distortion of the life force), Mars (the promotion of death-fear and war), Jupiter (the abuse of authority and power—political, spiritual, and institutional), and Saturn (control through greed and monetary power—the one percent dominating the masses).

From there we expanded to the cosmic level, exploring how the entire cosmos exists within consciousness itself. This led into the story of Cosmic History Chronicles, which is now being published in Portuguese in seven volumes. During the workshops I shared the story of how each volume emerged through a shared memory of cataclysm between Votan and myself, together with a deep urgency to recover forgotten knowledge.

What we commonly call history is usually the history of conflict—our school curriculum teaches us that history is primarily a record of wars, invasions, and political power struggles.

Depending on where we grow up, we are taught different versions of these events as definitive narratives.

Cosmic History, in contrast, is the history of harmony, the unbroken chain of the Absolute that permeates all facets of the relative realm known as history. It approaches the question differently by examining the deeper processes through which matter, life, and intelligence evolve throughout the universe.

Rather than simply cataloging events, it looks for patterns of transformation operating across many scales—from galaxies to civilizations.

Within this perspective, humanity evolves not only technologically but also through expanding levels of awareness. At certain moments in history, new knowledge emerges through individuals and lineages that transmit insights capable of reshaping entire cultures.

Seen in this way, Cosmic History is the history of harmony—exiled as a hidden stream that has always existed, the continuous unfolding of intelligence within the universe. The seven Chronicles are only a small fractal expression of this greater Cosmic History.

Every evening concluded with artistic presentations—dance, music, puppetry, and sacred song. Women kin who dance every Day Out of Time for peace offered a beautiful performance. A gifted puppeteer shared the musical history of Brazil through his art. Musicians played guitars and sang beneath the open sky. Kin 93 did an excellent job of creating a true experience of Time is Art.

In shared moments like these, it becomes clear that the noosphere is not an abstract concept. It is an embodied experience, and a remembrance of love and magic.

Argentina

After the gatherings in Brazil, we traveled to Argentina, where we held an evening event to activate the new frequency and introduce the newly published Spanish translation of The Uninscribed. This project was made possible through the dedication of many collaborators, with the translation initially led and largely completed by Rodrigo Urrea (Kin 38).

The event took place in the evening at the San Rafael Auditorium in downtown Buenos Aires, a space dedicated to anthroposophy and the work of Rudolf Steiner. Afterward we gathered outside, where the atmosphere was joyous and festive, with kin singing O Yum Hunab Ku beneath the night sky.

The following day we held a more focused meeting with kin from Argentina, Chile, Brazil, and Uruguay at the magical home of Kin 256 and Kin 112. The journey concluded with Martin Kin 112 giving me a Spanish version of The Mystery of the Maya, a “Choose your Own Adventure” book that was one of my favorites as a child and the first place I ever heard about the Maya. It felt like a perfect closing to the Zuvuya circuit.

Special thanks to Andre (Kin 93), Annibal (Kin 34), Ishram (Kin 187), Flaviah (Kin 228), Claudia (Kin 83), Alex (Kin 15), and Barbara (Kin 243), as well as to Dudy (Kin 256) and Martin (Kin 112) for hosting and for their continued dedication to this work. Deep gratitude also goes to all the kin who assisted in organizing the events/gatherings.

Side Note: South Atlantic Anomaly

On the Planet Holon, both Canela, Brazil and Buenos Aires reside in the “Skywalker” zone. (I wrote a full report on this on Inner Time).

Geophysically, this region overlaps with the South Atlantic Anomaly, a weakened area of Earth's magnetic field discovered during the early days of the space age. Satellites passing through this region experience increased radiation exposure and occasional data disturbances.

From the perspective of the Law of Time, Earth's magnetic field is more than a physical shield. It functions as a regulator of planetary coherence—a timing field that mediates the relationship between solar intelligence, the Earth, and human consciousness.

Since the nineteenth century, scientific measurements show a gradual weakening of this magnetic field, particularly in the region between South America and southern Africa. According to the Law of Time, this decline parallels the rise of mechanical time and the acceleration of industrial civilization.

Preface to the Spanish Edition of The Uninscribed: Initiation into the Heart of Time

By Stephanie South/Kin 185

This is the story of an initiate. I did not plan to write this book. I was undergoing a transformation that reshaped how I perceived reality, and I wrote from within that process as it unfolded. Uninscribed is what came through. It is an inner record of what occurs when higher-dimensional knowledge begins to descend—when the known self dissolves and something new begins to take root.

What I received was not knowledge in the conventional sense, nor a teaching that could simply be learned.

It was the Galactic Mayan Mind Transmission (GM108X), received through a direct relationship with José Argüelles/Valum Votan. This book traces that process from the inside, as it was lived.

The knowledge that emerged belongs to a new knowledge base—an entirely different way of organizing perception, grounded in the Law of Time and the synchronic order. It was not only studied; it was lived. This path required me to reexamine many conditioned beliefs: about who I was, how time moves, and what reality is made of.

It marked my entry into a body of knowledge that would later be articulated more fully in the Cosmic History Chronicles. This process is ongoing and ever-evolving.

Some readers will recognize this terrain. Others may feel something long dormant begin to awaken.

We are living through a time in which old systems are collapsing. Many sense that something profound is shifting, even if they cannot yet articulate it. This book exists within that transitional space—in the gap between the world we have known and the one now emerging.

To evolve, we must learn something genuinely new. The inner world must become our primary reality. That is where perception is formed. That is where fundamental transformation begins.

This book is offered in that spirit. Publishing Uninscribed in Spanish feels like a return. In this language, the book completes a cycle that was opened at its origin.

With gratitude to the translators Rodrigo (Kin 38), Josefina (Kin 167), and Mertxe (Kin 259), who made this edition possible, and to Alex (Kin 15) and José (Kin 112) for their careful proofreading. Stephanie South/Red Queen (Kin 185) NS1.38.6.23 White Cosmic Worldbridger, Kin 26.
